

Components of a Good Personal Website

Author: Jun Wang

Last updated: September 2023

- Concise writing.
- Clear and recognizable logo (e.g., a notebook logo can be interpreted as a CV, Research Statement, or an extended bio).
- A navigation bar to seamlessly transition between different sections.
- Way to return to the top for long websites.
- All links are inserted and functional.
- Minimal emojis. Additional emojis often do not convey more information.
- Minimal animations. They slow website loading and often do not convey additional information.
- A brief bio at the beginning of the website.
- Include a personal picture unless you are famous.
- A scrollable news section when there are more than ten news items.